

October 2015

"It is the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's obligation under the law to recover this species, and reintroductions into the wild from the more genetically diverse captive population are an essential part of that recovery process," U.S.F.W.S memo.

Triumphant Transfer

Mexican gray wolf M1229, was moved from the California Wolf Center to the Albuquerque Biological Park in New Mexico. He will be paired with Mexican gray wolf F1365 for breeding this season. Although we were sad to see him leave, we are very excited for M1229 and his new mate!

Supportive Service

United States Fish & Wildlife Service has released a memo ensuring they will move forward on releasing Mexican gray wolves in the Southwest. Both New Mexico and Arizona have ruled, at a state level, that they will not be releasing Mexican gray wolves. So this federal update is great news!

Excellent Event

At our Be a Champion for Wolvesevent on October 9, 2015 we raised over $34,000 for wild wolf recovery! This would not have been possible without our dedicated base of supporters, thanks to all who made it a success!

Mate M1139

Mexican gray wolf M1139 has found a new home at the California Wolf Center. He came all the way from Wolf Conservation Center and is the hopeful mate of Joy (F1227). We will be monitoring them closely and hoping for puppies this Spring!

Comments for Conservation

Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife has begun discussing the delisting gray wolves at a state level. Please send comments by the end of this week to odfw.commission@state.or.us to let them know Oregon wolves still need their protections! A healthy wolf population in California is dependent on a dispersing wolf population from Oregon.

Voice of the Volunteers

Steve Haiman is a retired teacher with a passion for music. He plays the guitar and uses his talent for engaging presentations at local elementary schools. He began volunteering, after being a California Wolf Center member, with his son and has become an important part of our family.

The California Wolf Center is dedicated to the recovery of wolves in the wildlands they once roamed. We envision a landscape where wolves thrive in healthy ecosystems and wolves and people successfully coexist.
